Brain function plays a major role in how much energy we have, how we handle stress, whether our immune system is up to par, and, in general, how much zest we have for life. Concentration, memory and mood – whether we are fifteen and struggling with math or sixty-five and looking forward to an active retirement, these matter. Nutrients which support brain health should be a part of any supplementation program.

Begin with the basics. When building a house, you start with the foundation; when building brain health, you look to the health of the body as a whole. Several studies have shown that merely supplementing the diet with the B vitamins and vitamin C can improve mood and mental functioning. Other studies have demonstrated that good regular dietary habits are the best way to ensure optimal mental and behavioral performance, for instance, in children and adolescents. Therefore, a good balanced multi-vitamin and mineral supplement should be the backbone to any nutritional program.

Proper nutrition is essential because it influences the production of the chemical messengers used by the brain and the rest of the nervous system. The messengers, called neurotransmitters, include acetylcholine, serotonin, noradrenaline (norepinephrine) and dopamine. Acetylcholine is significantly involved in mental acuity and memory. Nutrients influence neurotransmitters in various ways. For instance, vitamin B-5 (pantothenic acid) is necessary for the production of acetylcholine from the nutrient choline, which is provided by the diet in the form of lecithin found in foods such as eggs and soybeans. Lecithin, of course, has long been used as a supplement. (259 words used)

Q.7. Read the passage and answer the question given below:

TOPIC: Can a healthy lifestyle alter your genes?

Comprehensive lifestyle changes including a better diet and more exercise can lead not only to a better physique, but also to swift and dramatic changes at the genetic level, U.S. researchers said on Monday. In a small study, the researchers tracked 30 men with low-risk prostate cancer who decided against conventional medical treatment such as surgery and radiation or hormone therapy.

The men underwent three months of major lifestyle changes, including eating a diet rich in fruits, vegetables, whole grains, legumes and soy products, moderate exercise such as walking for half an hour a day, and an hour of daily stress management methods such as meditation. As expected, they lost weight, lowered their blood pressure and saw other health improvements. But the researchers found more profound changes when they compared prostate biopsies taken before and after the lifestyle changes. After three months, the men had changes in activity in about 500 genes -- including 48 that were turned on and 453 genes that were turned off. The activity of disease-preventing genes increases while a number of disease-promoting genes, including those involved in prostate cancer and breast cancer, shut down, according to the study published in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The research was led by Dr. Dean Ornish, head of the Preventive Medicine Research Institute in Sausalito, California, and a well-known author advocating lifestyle changes to improve health. "It's an exciting finding because so often people say, 'oh, it's all in my genes, what can I do?' Well, it turns out you may be able to do a lot," Ornish, who is also affiliated with the University of California, San Francisco, said in a telephone interview. "In just three months, I can change hundreds of my genes simply by changing what I eat and how I live?" That's pretty exciting," Ornish said. "The implications of our study are not limited to men with prostate cancer."

Answer these questions (choose the best answer):

1. The article basically states that a healthy lifestyle:
 - a) can even alter your genes for the better.
 - b) has no effect on your genes.
 - c) is good for the environment.
2. Apart from eating healthy food and exercising, the men in the study:
 - a) were put under a lot of stress.
 - b) were taught stress management methods.
 - c) were given a lot of meat.
3. In total, how many genes changed as a result of the healthy lifestyle?
 - a) 48
 - b) 453
 - c) 500
