About the Colloquium

Education is a harbinger of development, modernization and social change. A robust higher education system is very essential to generate new ideas and innovation that can propel global competitiveness and sustenance of a vibrant economy. A good quality higher education is a key to transition to knowledge economy.

Academic leadership, academic freedom and research ethics are related to each other and are the major components for ensuring a world class higher education standard. Academic leaders play a pivotal role in ensuring a vibrant academic culture. Academic freedom is necessary at the institutional level and at the individual level in order to pursue research, write, and adopt innovative pedagogical, creative thinking, and curricular best practices to sustain and grow at par with the global academic standards. A combination of freedom of thought, expression and association are also essential ingredients for the advocacy of praxis to human problems and for an epistemological break-through. In the present scenario, 'publish' or 'perish' culture for further academic career growth has resulted in the erosion of research ethics, academic credibility and integrity. In adherence to research ethics, the dogmatic views, ideological bias and obsession with 'ism' (nationalism, racism, casteism and communalism) could be avoided by the scholars to maintain objectivity of research.

The scope of legal education, liberal arts and social sciences has expanded with the changing nature of economy and society. There is an emerging trend in the academia to integrate humanities, arts with professional education, Science and Technology, Engineering, Medicine (STEM) courses in order to develop all aspects of human beings – intellectual, aesthetic, social, physical, emotional and moral as part of holistic education to produce good human beings and to create a better world. The integration of liberal arts with professional education has resulted in cognitive and lateral thinking of students and an enhancement of research skills in Ivy League Universities in the US.

In view of proliferation of law schools and spread of liberal arts and social science education today, it is a high time to deliberate upon academic leadership, academic freedom and research ethics in the fields of legal and social science education in order to have a deeper understanding of it.

To initiate further deliberations, Faculty of Law, Sri Guru Gobind Tricentenary (SGT) University in collaboration with Institute of Ethnic Studies (KITA), Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM), (National University of Malaysia) is organizing an “International Colloquium on Academic Leadership, Freedom and Research Ethics in Law and Social Sciences: Perspectives of India and Malaysia” scheduled on 13th November, 2019 (Wednesday) at Faculty of Law, SGT University, Gurugram, Haryana.
